TUESDAY, MAY 13, 1834.

The conduct of the Bank men in the Senate of the U. States exhibits an unfairness, to speak in the mildest terms, that cannot fail to shock all honorable minds. They in the first place usurp the rights of the House of Representatives and impeach the President—they trample alike on his rights and on the first principles of justice, and condemn him without a hearing. They then refuse to receive his explanations, and refutation of the charges they have made against him. Could the Inquisition afford an example of injustice more glaring? The Senate do not stop here in their offensive course—they have pronounced the Protest of the President to be "inconsistent with the just authority of the two Houses of Congress." What can be more derogatory to the rights and dignity of the House of Representatives than this resolution? What is it but saying to that body, you do not know how to maintain your rights or your dignity, and we of the Senate will protect them for you. This resolve not only transcends the Constitutional right of the Senate, but it is rude, impudent and offensive in its character as respects the other House. It is quite time, that the people put an effectual curb on this corrupt and aristocratic branch of the Government.

Politicians are as thick as blackberries in summer—the men and their sons, the ladies and their daughters, are all politicians; and those whose conversation was once confined to thread-lace and handsome beaux, talk of nothing now but the U. S. Bank and the removal of the deposits. Webster, Forsyth, Clay and Van Buren, have usurped the places of Cooper, Percival, Willis and Paulding. The next annuals are to be filled with political caricatures, and the next importation of shawls are to be embroidered with representations of the Capitol at Washington, the Mother Bank at Philadelphia, and the battle of New Orleans—truly "all is fair in politics."

We confess, in common with the American people, that our hopes rest only in the firmness, boldness, patriotism, and decision of the Senate of the United States.—That body has now the government under its protection, and can alone save it.—N. Y. Star.

Bad protection this! The people's Government resting on the Senate for protection, and a majority of that Senate owned by the Bank. The people will protect their own government both against treason and corruption.

Andre.—A writer in the New York Courier, in alluding to the letter of Dr Thacher relative to the execution of Andre, says—

"But how comes it that no American, from patriotic or other motives, has ever written, or, beyond the circle of his immediate friends, has spoken of the untimely fate of the brave, well educated and accomplished Captain Andre, who was executed?"

Howe, not as a rebel, but as a spy? How comes it that none has ever volunteered the removal of his remains? Excepting Huddy, none that I have heard of, were hanged as rebels. The prisoners taken in '76 at Long Island, were indeed threatened; and some of them, with ropes curled round their necks, were seated on coffins which had been prepared for them. Of this number was Otto Williams, who for courage, accomplishments, appearance, and every thing which might become a man, was inferior to none in any army.—Several young officers were captured, on the retreat from Long Island, and brought before General Howe. 'Do you know, young men,' said the General, 'that your rebellion against your king, empowers me to hang you every one?' Lieutenant Dunscomb, a worthy son of a respectable father of this city, answered, 'Hang and be damned! I fought for my country, and am ready to die for her.'

Masquerading.—The revival of masquerades by the Duchess of Bedford has been the subject of comment in several papers. The French (says an old book) taught the English masquerading, which has been an amusement of that fantastical people ever since the days of Charles VI, if not earlier. For in his time there was exhibited a most dreadful scene of that kind, which one would have expected to cool a l'âme échauffée eagerness for masquerades ever after. The king and five of the court, on occasion of a marriage, disguised themselves like satyrs, by covering their naked bodies with linen habits, close to their limbs, which habits were bedaubed with resin, on which down was stuck. One of the company, in a frolic, running a light against one of them, as they were dancing in a ring, all the six were instantly enveloped with flames, and the whole company in a consternation, lest the fire should be communicated to all. Nothing was to be seen or heard but flames and screams. Four of the six died two days after, in cruel agonies; and the King, who was subject to a weakness of brain, was overset by the fright, so that he was ever after outrageous by fits, and incapable of government.

We learn from the Philadelphia papers of Saturday, that the President and Directors of the U. S. Bank, had been summoned to appear before the Investigating Committee, on that day, and 'to bring with them the credit books of said Bank, showing the indebtedness of individuals to said bank.'

The President and Directors appeared accordingly, but declined producing their books, at the room of the Committee.

Trade of Boston.—There were 307 clearances to foreign ports up to May 10, 1834; and up to the same time last year, 268—Increase, 39. The number of foreign arrivals up to May 10, 1834, were 310, and during the corresponding time of last year, 315.

Loami Baldwin, Esq. has been employed under a resolution of the City Council, to make a survey, in order to ascertain whether a full supply of good water can be obtained for the use of the citizens of Boston.

An extra session of the Rhode Island legislature terminated on Saturday last. The Senate rejected a series of resolutions condemning the removal of the deposits, and recommending their restoration to the U. S. Bank.

Col. Crockett has gone, and matters in the newspaper line are rather dull—some of the Editors are seeking for a civil war, merely for the purpose of keeping the joints of their bones from rusting—terrific chaps, these men of the Press—on paper.

"Death and Sugar."—The leading Nullifying paper in S. C., the Charleston Mercury, says that "Jackson has exceeded every usurping tyrant, ancient or modern, in barefaced hypocrisy." Modest!

POLICE COURT.

Coming to Boston on a spree, but staying a little longer than is agreeable.—There appears to be a very general habit among country Turkeys, to come to Boston, on Saturday night, to fat up on Sunday, when in fact they gorge their gizzards till they can't stir, and are frequently beholden to the proprietors of the old line of no-horse stages for a conveyance to the Leverett street Turkey roost. Whether they come here, out of complacency to the superiority of the feed, or its cheapness, or from a desire to hide their enjoyments from their immediate friends and acquaintances, is not known. But whatever may be their motives in coming, we think the energetic efforts of the authorities to check the influx of this unmarketable kind of poultry, will be more salutary than satisfactory to the gobblers, as will be seen by the disposal of the three following cases:—

Philip Colligan was formally arraigned, and pleaded—"Well, sir, I was in liquor—it was indeed a most unfortunate thing, I know."

Constable.—We were called to his house in Stillman street, by a child, who said a man was killing his wife.

Female Witness.—He's a terrible salvidge—and has been going these rigs these ten years, and does nothing for his family; when he's in his drink [not when the drink is in him, mind reader] he beats his wife to death—I've seen him strike her on the naked breast, when she had nothing on til her but a paticcoat and shift, and that, too, when she was heavy.

Philip.—I work out in the country, but on Saturday I came in to have a social time with my friends—yesterday I went out to take a parting drink, which I expect didn't agree with me very well—I then rambled back to bid my children farewell, and I don't recollect what took place after, as I was devoid of all sense. But if you'll let me go this time, I'll promise never to get drunk again, but I'll go right out of town.

Court.—You have been in this habit a long time, and it is absolutely dangerous to permit you to go at large. Mr Clerk say four months in the House of Correction.

Philip.—Then I'm a ruined man.—[i.e. gone goose.]

Samuel Hayward, a pretty decent looking fowl, with a fine brandy bloom, as well became a lighoury character, was jolied to jail in a hand-cart, on Sunday afternoon; he was laying drunk in Commercial street, surrounded by a small million of men, boys and vagabonds, who were cracking their ruthless jokes over his fallen fortunes. "I gits tipsy, I know; but I'm no common drunkard," he answered to the complaint.—On Sunday a friend offered to lend him money to go home with, as he had spent all his own, but he replied to the friendly proposal—"I came to town to have a good time, and d—n me if I start tack or sheet, till I have had a regular build drunk."—Four months in the house of correction, which was more than he bargained for—he looked as if it was "not in the bond;" he had vowed under duress to be "not in the bond;" he to the house of correction, for four months, for the fulfilment of his vow, was not a condition in the contract.

Richard Tremaine, after serving four terms in the House of Correction, turned his back indignantly upon the city, with a solemn resolution never to darken its gates again; but, in an ill-starred hour, he yielded to a desire to see the haunts of his former joys, and crimes and cares; but before he had visited half the pleasant nooks and alleys he so fondly remembered, he was snatched up by the Constables, and despatched to the House of Correction, for six months.

All three of these infuriated fuddlers were natives of the "Fast anchored Isle"—the "Queen of the Ocean"—and countrymen of the tasty Trollope and the divine Fiddler.

Encouraging.—So far, we have gained more subscribers than we have lost, by the alteration in our paper.

The Grand Lodge of Rhode Island has resigned its charter into the hands of the Legislature of that State.

The Reform Methodist Church, in Montgomery, Alabama, was consumed by fire on the 30th ult.

For the Boston Morning Post,
C. H. EATON.

After a southern tour of some five or six months, our gifted young townsman, Mr Eaton, is again among us. On Thursday last, as Sir Giles Overreach, he commenced an engagement at the Tremont. The plaudits with which he was received were long-continued and even enthusiastic. It is well known that in Massinger's plays we have but few of those "coups de Theatre" of those opportunities for points by position and incident, which abound in the productions of most dramatists, particularly the modern. To give, therefore, to the impersonation of Sir Giles Overreach any extraordinary effect requires deep thought and decided histrionic power. Mr E. has proved that he is fully competent to this task.—The manner in which "the precious evidence" is drawn forth satisfied us that Mr Eaton is capable of improving upon the fine points of actors of established repute.—At the close of this scene, there is another instance of this capacity—on recovering from the insensibility in which he is taken by his servants, he beckons to his daughter to approach him with apparent effort, at the same time pronouncing her name and repeating it in a subdued, forgiving tone; as she obeys the call, he concentrates his expiring energies into one grand effort to seize her, and sinks lifeless into his attendants' arms. Mr Eaton has very much improved in his stage deportment. The shouts of applause by which a crowded auditory evinced their satisfaction with his performance at the close of the play must have been indeed heart-cheering.

Stage effect.—One night at the Dublin Theatre, Moss, a good low comedian, but full of the furor of extravagance in his acting, played Lovegold, in the comedy of The Miser. To give an additional, and, as he thought, a happy stroke to the part, when he was frantic for the loss of his money, he ran to the front of the stage, and snatched the harpsichord player's wig off, exclaiming, as loud as he could—"You have got my money! you have got my money! and I'll keep your wig till you return it!" The gentlemen of Cecilia's band instantly put their hands on their heads to secure their wigs, and immediately left the orchestra.—The poor man whose bald head had been exposed, and the sight of which got the ridiculous player a thunder of applause, could get no satisfaction, from Moss for the insult, for he called it a theatrical joke.—Mirror.

Signor Paganini will visit London in the course of a week or two, to make arrangements for a series of concerts, for which he has already secured the services of several eminent vocalists. The concerts will be given early next month.

Mr Cooper, the Tragedian, has been recently forming in the South to sea large and as gratified audiences as in his best days.

A man devoured by Wolves.—The Upper Canada Herald states that a young man named Briss was attacked and devoured by wolves a short time since near Kingston.

American Beef was taken from this country to England, in the Virginian, and arrived perfectly fresh. Ice to Calcutta, and fresh beef to England! After this, what may not be attempted?

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, on Friday, Mr Webster, from the Committee on Finance, reported the bill from the House of Representatives, making appropriations for the Army, for the year 1834, with two amendments;—which were passed—and the rules being suspended, and the bill having been ordered to be engrossed, it was read a third time, and passed. The bill for the preservation and repair of the Cumberland Road, was read a third time and passed. The resolution offered by Mr Ewing, calling for information from the State Department, with regard to the Superintendent of the Patent Office, was taken up and adopted. The Senate then proceeded to consider the bill granting a township of land to certain exiles from Poland. Mr Poindexter moved to amend the bill, by requiring one settler for every five hundred acres, instead of three hundred, as provided for in the bill; which was argued to; and the bill ordered to be engrossed for a third reading.—The Senate adjourned to Monday.

In the House, Mr Banks, on the part of the Minority, from the Committee of Elections, presented a counter Report, to that presented by the majority, in the case of Mr Moore and Mr Letcher, which he moved to have printed, and its further consideration postponed until Tuesday next.

The general appropriation bill was taken up, and a long debate ensued in regard to the compensation of the officers of the Customs. When the Washington papers were put to press, the House had not adjourned.

Politics seem to rage fiercely in Canada. Persons avowing different sentiments, have actually ceased communication with each other in private life; others have descended to personalities, injuring the feelings of their opponents in the most essential point. The Quebec Mercury gives the following description of an affair which had just taken place:—N. Y. Star.

Mr Lelievre took his antagonist by that feature formed to support spectacles, and which the devil twenked for St. Dunstan, with red hot tongs, and balanced the account by the application of his foot to that part of his offender's body on which he supports himself when writing. Mr O. P. thought that the "better part of valour is discretion," brought Mr Lelievre before the Justices in Quarter Session, by whom he was condemned in a fine of four pounds, but it was not thought necessary to bind him to keep the peace.

The Editor of the Settler says, of duels, that they serve to kill time if they kill nothing else.

Melancholy Occurrence.—An Editor of a National Wig paper at the West, has been way-laid and severely beaten by some individuals of his own party. The cause of the outrage is said to have been, that the Editor had accidentally uttered a political truth. Such an act of insubordination, of course, set the whole Wig-wam in a ferment, and being the first instance of the kind which had occurred in their ranks, they determined to punish it with exemplary severity.—Taunton Sun.

Anecdote.—A lawyer the other day, had the defence of a fellow, charged before the court, with having obtained goods under false pretences. By the aid of the great skill and professional acumen, for which the advocate is distinguished, he, at length, succeeded in persuading the court to release his client. The accused party, immediately afterwards, called upon his friend, the counsellor, to pay him the fee to which he was richly entitled.

"Well," says the lawyer, "the court didn't think you such an infernal scoundrel, as you may be after all." "Not a word. Not a word, Mr Attorney. Keep the judge don't know me, nor you either. Perhaps it is as well for both of us that he don't."—Lovell Mercury.

A susceptible Thief.—John Hamilton was brought up for stealing a coat from his boarding house in Mulberry street. When placed at the bar, he delivered himself as follows:—"You are a magistrate, and a rich man—I'm a thief and a poor man: so you can't enter into my feelings, and consequently I don't want you to trifle with or pain them by a long rigmarole examination. I wanted a coat and I stole one; I have been detected, and must be punished for it. I know your duty as well as my own; it was my duty to have escaped, but I couldn't—it's your duty to commit me; so do it off-hand, and let me be tried as soon as possible, and you'll confer an especial favor on me." He was committed.—N. Y. Transcript.

A Skeleton.—In digging a cellar for a new building on the site of No. 16 Ludlow street, a human skeleton was found about eighteen inches beneath the surface of the ground. It appeared to be the frame of a person of middle age. The old house had no cellar, so that these remains were directly beneath the floor. There was a strong suspicion excited that foul deeds had placed the person in that place.—N. Y. C. M.

Schooner Orleans, Capt. Chase, from New York bound to Boston, was struck with lightning during the severe thunder storm on Sunday night—when off the Hardings. The lightning shivered the foremast, passed into the forecabin, and out of the bows, starting two of the plank. The men were all aft at the time, taking in the mainsails, and no one was injured.

Whilst celebrating the recent triumph of the opponents of the national administration at Catskill, N. Y. Mr Charles Gleason, a respectable mechanic, who was loading a cannon, had one of his arms taken off above the elbow, owing to the vent not being stopped. The lacerated limb was found seventy-six yards from the spot where the gun stood.

A verdict of $1000 was rendered by the Circuit Court sitting in Monroe County, N. Y. on the 29th ult. in favor of an attorney by the name of Pratt, against a justice of the peace by the name of Price, in an action of slander. Both parties resided in the town of Rush. The slanderous words consisted in repeatedly stating that plaintiff had sworn falsely.

Monsieur Ferron, engaged for several years as a teacher of fencing and the French language in the University of Virginia hung himself by a silk handkerchief a short time since in the hospital at Lexington, Ky. He had been sent to the hospital for his habitual intemperance.

Dr Lopez, of Georgetown, S. C. has raised in his garden, the present season, some strawberries of extraordinary size. Four, from a basket presented an editor, measure, in circumference, one 3 3/4, inches, one 3 1/4, two 3 inches each.

The Lafayette College at Easton, Penn. has been completed and the students already moved into it—on the occasion of their taking possession of their new quarters, the students illuminated the building.

Death by Lightning.—A young lady named Eliza Adelaide Bell was killed at Lynchburg, Va., a short time since, by a stroke of lightning, while closing a window.

A lady of Philadelphia, Mrs Montgomery, being attracted to her window by the cry of fire lately, she lost her balance, fell from the third story and was killed instantly.

Died, at Cheshunt, England, in the 90th year of her age, Mrs Susan Cromwell, great-grand-daughter of Oliver Cromwell the Protector, and the last relic of the family.

A man devoured by Wolves.—The Upper Canada Herald states that a young man named Briss was attacked and devoured by wolves a short time since near Kingston.

American Beef was taken from this country to England, in the Virginian, and arrived perfectly fresh. Ice to Calcutta, and fresh beef to England! After this, what may not be attempted?

A numerous assemblage of persons collected at an early hour on Monday morning on the Mallow and Fernoy road, to witness a march of ten miles in 120 minutes, by Captain John F. G. Campbell, of the 91st (Argyllshire) Regiment, accoutred in heavy marching order of a private soldier—viz. knapsack and kit, complete; great-coat and mess tin, musket, bayonet, and sixty rounds of ball cartridge; total 50 pounds weight. Heavy bets were pending on the issue. The gallant Captain started at 8 A. M., and performed this arduous undertaking in the unparalleled short space of time of 107 1/4 minutes, thus winning the match with the greatest ease, having 12 3/4 minutes to spare.
